I. A domestic fowl, and related senses.

I.1.a. A domesticated gallinaceous bird (Gallus gallus domesticus) used as a source of eggs and meat, typically having a fairly large, stout body, a comb and wattles on the head, and large feet for foraging on the ground. In early use spec.: a young individual of this bird; = chick n.¹ A.11.4 (now rare). Old English-

Chickens were domesticated chiefly from the red junglefowl, G. gallus, at least five thousand years ago, probably originally in South Asia. They are now kept throughout the world in numerous breeds which vary in plumage, size, and shape.

For occasional uses with unchanged plural see etymological note.
